A Line o' Cheer Each Day o' the Year. By JOHN KENDRICK BANGS.

Pirst printing of an original poem, written daily for The Washington Herald,

THE VICTOR.

With courage and hope and a smiling mien, And spirit in face of defeat serene, No prizes or goals 'neath the blazoning sun Need rest in the realm of the things unwon.

So look to your nerve, and the smile in your eye, And challenge the chance as it passes you by, And laugh at despair, flinging hope in its face, And you'll stand at the fore at the end of the race (Convright, 1915.)

Carranza Tempting Fate.

It would appear that the fool-killer has been on a vacation. He certainly has not been on duty in Ireland for some weeks past. Had he been, there would have been no Irish rebellion at a time when an army of something over a million men was in camp nearby in England and Scotland ready to take the field against any enemy of the English government. It has been shown, too, that all the chief leaders of the Irish people and the great majority of the Irish people themselves were opposed to the rebellion. It is well nigh inconceivable that a few score leaders, however irresponsible, should have been found to start such a movement. But, as Schiller said: "Against stupidity the very gods themselves contend in vain."

In Mexico likewise the killer who is supposed to have the management of fools seems to have been off duty. New York City is in a fair way to solve the problem of eliminating or at least very largely curtailing loss by fires due to carelessness, according to the 1015 report of Fire Commissioner Adamson, just submitted to Mayor Mitchel. The Jewish People.

By JOHN D. BARRY. Every now and then something happens that shows how much of the elemental barbarism remains in our society. A fierce racial prejudice will burst like a flame. Some one who, it would seem, ought to know better will commit a wholly unprovoked act, or say a gratuitously outrageous thing about a race or some member of a race that he fosters ill-feeling against. Of recent years several such incidents have taken place. In themselves they are mercly pitiful, far more damaging to those who feel the prejudice than to those it is designed to harm. In the case of prejudice against the Jewish people there is so much wrong-headedness, so much stupidity, that at times it seems absurdly grotesque. Burke used to say that you couldn't indict a nation. In his remark we all recognize the obvious truth. It ought to make us see

In Louisiana, in Florida, and in South Carolina, though desperately beset, the Republicans had, by desperate means, kept their hold upon the governments they had made.

The troops of the United States were first used to adjust the contest in Louisiana. The revised constitution of Louisiana, revised in the interest of the congress failed to pass the only measure of relief its leaders were able to think of, a bill providing for a new election, and the President recognized and instaliana. The revised constitution of Louisiana, revised in the interest of the congressional plan of reconstruction, provided, as most of the new southern constitutions did, for the detarmination of the results of all elections by a returning board so constituted as to be always under the control of the existing administration of the State.

That board had the right to reject, without judicial process and upon its own mere opinion, the votes of all counties or precincts where force or fraudhad been employed; and it used that power to check the rising Democratic vote wherever it seriously threatened the supremacy of those in authority.
